Following are the Bible records of the son of Jacob Barreckman, also named Jacob Barrickman, of Kentucky to Indiana; the Bible Records of Henry Barkman-Barikman, a son of Peter Barrickman-Bergmann; the Bible records of John Barkman, a son of Peter Barrickman, and of Lambert Barekman, the great-grand-son of Peter Barrickman.

JACOB BARRICKMAN was born February 17, 1763 in the colony of Pennsylvania (or perhaps in Frederick county, Maryland). He was a son of Peter Bergman (Barrackman, Bergman) who had emigrated to the American colonies in 1749/5- from the Palatinate in Germany. Jacob's mother was Ursulla, she passed away a few years after his birth. Jacob Barrickman grew up in the wilderness of frontier Maryland and Pennsylvania. The Conococheague Territory was one of the most untamed areas in the colonies and the scene of frequent Indian uprisings. At the time of the French and Indian War (in which Jacob's father was a soldier), the Indians rose up and scattered most of the settlers over into the wilds of Bedford and Westmoreland counties of Pennsylvania; Peter Barrackman and his growing family were among this group of displaced settlers. Jacob's father was a typical rough German-American pioneer. As young Jacob grew up, he probably spent many long hours tilling the soil with his brothers and helping his father run the ferry boat, which he operated near Fort Pitt.

Then the horror of war swept into the fertile valleys of Western Pennsylvania. Jacob Barrickman, at the tender age of seventeen years, helped the American colonial cause by enlisting in military service in the Revolution. He served with the near legendary, Capt. Jeremiah Lockrey from April to October of 1780, in the defense of the Pennsylvania frontiers. The battles in which the young man took part were bloody ones, and Jacob had to worry about the illusive Indian as well as the regiments of British troops.

D.A.R. Nat. No. 308454

Jacob Barrickman married Jane Swan, of Pennsylvania, March 24, 1784 at Newport, Kentucky. They were blessed with eleven children: Martha, Mary (Polly), Sarah, Jane, John, Jacob Jr., Keturah, Nancy, James T., William and Eliza May.

Jane Swan Barrickman was born March 1st, 1757. Her parents were Hugh and Martha (Benson) Swan. Her grandparents were Henry and Elizabeth (Bowen) Swan. Her great-great-grandparents were Colonel Charles and Sarah (Van Meter) Swan.

Jacob Barrickman and his family were still in Campbell County, Kentucky, in 1791, where he was referred to as "one of the chief men of Newport!" They remained in the area of Campbell County, Kentucky, until 1812, when they moved to Franklin County, Indiana.

Frontier Indiana was also a wilderness. Almost as if he felt to the restlessness, "on the move" pioneer spirit which Frederick Johnson Turner wrote about, Jacob moved to the Hoosier state for "elbow room". He received two government land grants, one in 1811 and another in 1814. Jacob's father had also moved to Indiana, at an earlier time to the vicinity of Knox County.

Jacob could watch his many offspring and grandchildren grow and prosper in the new area around Fairfield township. His wife died May 29, 1833 and Jacob followed her on Feb. 23, 1842. He was buried on the Cory farm in Franklin County. He was a typical example which characterized our early America.
